The word patent is derived from the Latin patere (to show) and is used to describe a legal right granted to an inventor for a limited period of time, typically 20 years, in exchange for the inventor disclosing the details of the invention to the public. The patent system is designed to encourage innovation by providing inventors with the exclusive right to make, use, and sell their invention for a certain period of time. This right is granted by the government, usually through a patent office, and is enforceable by law. Patents are typically granted for inventions that are new, non-obvious, and useful. The patent system is a key component of intellectual property law and is essential for the development of new technologies and products.

Since the program's launch, it earned original commitments from donors in the community, state and national levels, including the U.S. Army, International Rescue and the U.S. National Academy of Arts and Sciences. "We're now in the process of raising the additional $1.5 million needed to launch the program," says the director. "We're also looking for a private foundation to help cover the $1.5 million gap in full program costs."

Brain drain now a nat'l 'hemorrhage'

By Christian V. Esguerra

IT'S OFFICIAL. THE BRAIN DRAIN HAS BECOME a "national hemorrhage." Some 80 percent of government doctors are now enrolled in nursing schools nationwide so they can land higher-paying jobs as nurses overseas, according to a group of concerned health professionals.

The situation was troubling since one Filipino doctor tended to between 10,000 and 26,000 patients, warned the Health Alliance for Democracy (HEAD).

The local ratio was a far cry from the United States and even Cuba where there was one doctor for every 225 patients.

"Let's look at the irony - we are producing so many nurses yet our hospitals are lacking in quality nurses and the quality of health service that we're giving to Filipinos is very poor," Dr. Gene Nisperos, HEAD secretary general, said yesterday in a press conference in Quezon City.

HEAD, an organization of doctors, nurses and other health professionals, linked up with the Alliance of Health Workers (AHW) to pressure the government and other stakeholders to address the worsening health care problem.

Last week, the AHW predicted that the local health care system would crumble in two to three years unless the exodus of doctors and nurses was arrested.

In the media briefing, Nisperos said the brain drain started in the 1960s when doctors and nurses left for higher studies and training overseas.

By the mid-1970s, however, the Philippines was already the top exporter of doctors and nurses in the world, second only to India in peddling local doctors abroad.

The problem of health professionals leaving the country for better pay and working conditions came to a head in the late 1990s when the US and several European countries jacked up their demands for doctors and nurses.

Bandwagon

From 2000 to 2003, Nisperos said a total of 51,580 Filipino nurses left the country. In 2004, some 5,000 doctors jumped on the bandwagon to work as nurses. Around 4,000 more doctors are taking up nursing this year.

The growing number of doctors settling for a nurse's cap has been welcomed by nursing schools. At least 45 of them now offer an abbreviated nursing course for doctors lasting between 1 1/2 to 3 years, according to HEAD.

Nisperos said administrations, past and present, should have taken concrete steps to keep doctors and nurses in the country.

"This is mainly a government-sponsored phenomenon," he said. "We believe strong medicine is needed to address the hemorrhage in the health sector."

The HEAD-AHW alliance proposed four steps to deal with the health sector crisis: First, the Arroyo administration should increase the budget for health care and abide by the World Health Organization prescription that countries set aside at least 5 percent of their gross national product for this purpose. At present, only 0.6 percent of the GNP was purportedly allocated to the health sector.

Second, the government should work to adequately compensate doctors and nurses. In the South African country of Namibia, the alliance said a junior physician earned $1,161 monthly while a Filipino counterpart here had a salary of between $300 and $400.

Third, the government should review - or perhaps rescind - its commitments to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Such commitments purportedly allow countries like the United Kingdom to lure local doctors and nurses to work abroad, with no regard for the fate of the local health care system.

Fourth, there should be more consultations among all stakeholders in the health care crisis, particularly patients, to arrive at other concrete solutions.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE HONORABLE SENATOR RICHARD GORDON

Dear Senator Gordon,

We, the members of the Chapter of International Representatives of the Philippines, Incorporated (CIRPI), the Philippine Automotive Association (PAA), the Automotive Industry Workers Alliance (AIWA), and the Motor Vehicle Parts Manufacturers Association of the Philippines, Incorporated (MVPMAPI) composed of 15,000 employees, workers and supporting support in your battle against isolated smuggling and the importation of second-hand vehicles into the country.

Recent developments have shown strong indications that the importation of these vehicles may soon again be allowed. This clearly contradicts explicit provisions of an existing Republic Act 9168, that bans the importation of Right Hand Drive vehicles. This that runs contrary to the President's stated objectives for automotive industry under Executive Order 114 and to recent pronouncements calling for the creation of a law that will strengthen the elimination of used vehicle importation.

We, however, CIRPI, PAA, AIWA and MVPMAPI share in your opinion that "these developments are a threat to the automotive industry and the country's economy." We, therefore, call for your support in the fight against these developments.

We join you in your fight, along with the many other Filipinos, who only wish for genuine economic progress for our country. We stand by our faith to God and government that these you will surely prosper individually as people as well as a nation, willing to fight for what is right and doing what has to be done to protect this country from those who are looking only after their self-interest.

God Bless You and God Bless Our Country!

A photograph of a page from an old manuscript, showing several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is written on aged, slightly discolored paper. The handwriting is dense and fills most of the page.

The diagram illustrates the experimental design as a sequence of three stages: Stimulus, Response, and Feedback. Each stage is represented by a box containing a word. Arrows indicate the flow from Stimulus to Response, and from Response to Feedback. The words in the boxes are: Stimulus (e.g., 'cat'), Response (e.g., 'cat'), and Feedback (e.g., 'cat').

Subjecting patients to new, unproven treatments is the province of the medical research community, not the marketplace. But when a new treatment is shown to be effective, it's only a matter of time before it's available to patients. And when that happens, it's often the patients who are left with the bill.

In memory of Maningning, young poet and artist

by Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.)

SHE WENT TO UNIVERSITY IN 1986, her first year spent in a rooming house in Beijing. When she came to the States, she found a different place to live, one that she says "has really put [her] through a lot of stress." She moved to a rooming house in New York City, and she says she "wasn't used to the noise and the people and the way they lived."

From runway to everyday

When it comes to fashion, the runway is often the first place to see the latest trends. But what happens when those trends trickle down to the everyday? The answer is often a mix of practicality and style.

One of the most popular ways to bring runway fashion to the everyday is through accessories. Items like necklaces, scarves, and handbags can add a touch of high fashion to even the simplest outfit.

Another way to bring runway fashion to the everyday is through clothing. Many designers now create collections that are both stylish and practical, making it easier for consumers to incorporate runway trends into their everyday wardrobe.

Finally, one of the most effective ways to bring runway fashion to the everyday is through color. Many designers use bold, vibrant colors on the runway, and these colors often become popular in everyday clothing.
